Conversing Across the Sea. The Paris correspondent of the Daily Tele graph gives the following account of the latest scientific sensation:

"A remarkably interesting experiment has iast been made at Calais and Dover, between which places aconversation has been kept up viva voce by means of a new kind of telaphone, which has been patented under the name of which has been patented under the name of the rophone. Not only were the words whispered into the appearatus at Calias distinctly heard at Dover, and of course vice versa, but the listener at one end was perfectly well able to distinguish by the mere tones of the voice the person who was speaking at the other end.

"The scientific specisis s present were asin the anormous condensation produced by the metal covering which protects the cable and to the induction caused by the simultaneous passage of telegraph c despatches along other -ires of the cable. It should be observed that while the human voice was being tran-mitted through one of the wires, the other wires were being employed for the transmission of ordina. ty salegraphio messages. Moreover, the experimput- were conducted between the hours of en and four, that is, in the busiest part of the day, when the wires are in unseasing requisi-

The Pope's Peculiarities.

His Huliness Pope Leo. XIII. appears to be a decidedly enigmatical personage, if we may itust the account given of him by the Roman correspondent of the Cologue Gozatte. The most striking fact about him so far appears to be the slight extent to which his character is known either by the faithful at large or by the inwates of the Vationa. Every one knew how Pius IX, lived; his hours were all allotted beforeband, and the same duties always performed at the same moment. There is a total want of this regularity in his successor. He keeps late hours, and has sometimes been found by his servants in the early morning half dazad after writing through the night. He asall his meals served to him in the great at privacy, is much more sparing of auciences than was Fius, and even his State Beere tary and the Cardinals can only see him at irregular intervals. The great icoovation he has made has been his partial supersession of the above mentioned official, who under Flus IX. practically administered the affairs of the Papacy. He has set on foot a chancellery of his own, consisting of three private recretaries, and conducts his affairs with their aid quite independently of the State Secretary, and often over his head. It not unfrequently happens that orders go down to the bis hopcs from the State Secretary, and are canceled in a day or two by different orders from the Pope, or that the Secretary brings papers to his Holiness and tells him that he has settled a parbe told that the Pope himself had already set-tled it in quite a different way. One thing is clear, that Leo XIII. means to be master in his own house; but one exact aim and tendency of his policy is by no means equally evident. Lee comes from the country of the Cioccari, and it is believed in Italy that a man from that district is commonly rather deep-a notion which appears also to be strongly entertsined by the correspondent - Pall Mall Gazette.
